SUPERSTORE NEGOTIATIONS

YOUR NEGOTIATIONS TEAM,
A REAL CONNECTION TO YOU

April 8, 2020

UFCW Local 401 will be doing its utmost to push for clarity and safety on the issues that are critical for our members throughout COVID-19 and beyond.

negotiation process.

We are pushing forward with negotiations with Loblaw. And with current technology, there is no reason for us not to be able to use alternatives to in-person negotiations during these circumstances.

As described previously, we are employing “rotating bargaining.” Rotating bargaining ensures a more diverse representation of the issues affecting you. This way, more members can share in providing the best cross-section of representation from the broadest mixture of departments, provincial regions, and store locations.

So, to accelerate our momentum, Local 401 is now privileged to be able to announce the selected Superstore Negotiating Team for the expected negotiations.

To facilitate this Negotiation Team member attendance will, when needed, alternate between Red and Blue teams which will be attending negotiations at these times and locations. However, when bargaining is in either Edmonton or Calgary both Red and Blue teams for that city will attend bargaining sessions.

Pulled from over 400 UFCW members working in Superstores across the province who sent their application, these members will closely guide the
